

Abstract: A packaging container having a chromatic color ink layer which is formed in a light-blocking printed layer (3), wherein a chromatic color ink applied to the chromatic color ink layer contains a white color family pigment and a black color family pigment and the contents of said black color family pigment amount to 3 to 5 parts by weight per 100 parts by weight of the total amount of the pigments in the chromatic color ink. The packaging container retains appropriate opacifying properties and light-blocking properties and provides no metallic residue when incinerated.